Combining elements of contemporary ambient and electronica with the influence of Holy Minimalist composers such as Part and Gorecki, over the last decade experimental cellist/violinist Ayres has created a unique and consistently strong body of work.

This latest recording has metamorphosed from its inception some years ago as a short, improvised piece for ‘live’ performance into a scored, orchestral suite.

In it, Ayres interprets the neuro-scientific qualities of Ultradian Rhythms, where natural cycles occur, in a musical context and maintains the unique approach taken with its predecessor “Harmogram Suite” wherein different playing techniques, recording set ups and textures have been deployed to create an authentic ‘live’ orchestral environment.

Written in six movements, ‘Variations 1-6’ and closing track ‘Ultradian’ comprise a complex architecture of over-dubbed sound layers, with every instrument and part played by the artist, forging still further a modern classical music of swooning intensity.

It’s a work that further evidences Ayres’ talent for evocating extraordinary emotions within a corresponding stillness.
